The Human Services Agency strives to strengthen Ventura County by administering programs that have a positive impact on key community concerns including food insecurity, access to health care and insurance, child and elder abuse, unemployment and homelessness. The Human Services Agency serves as a foundation for improved career paths and family lives and as a safety net for individuals facing temporary setbacks due to loss of a job, illness or other challenges.

Over the last three years, the economy has begun to stabilize with the county unemployment rate falling from 5.4% in June 2016 to 3.6% in June 2019. During the same period in time, participation in key assistance programs has declined: CalWORKs by 19%, CalFresh by 13%, and Medi-Cal by 5%. Despite the progress made towards a sustainable economic recovery, 1 in 4 county residents still access safety net services.

CalWORKs Participants

- 2017: 11,876
- 2018: 10,277
- 2019: 8,994

Growth of Senior Population Reveals Elders at Risk

Over the next decade, California will be confronted with a demographic shift of epic proportions: Seniors are California’s fastest-growing population. Between now and 2026, the number of Californians 65 and older is expected to climb by 2.2 million, according to projections by the state Department of Finance. By contrast, the number of 25- to 64-year-olds is projected to grow by just more than half a million; the number of Californians younger than 25 will grow by a mere 2,500.*

In Ventura County, the number of seniors is projected to grow to 205,000 by 2020, and 264,000 by the year 2030, comprising a third of the County’s population. As the senior population swells, aging residents require more medical care and the demand for safety-net programs for the elderly — such as financial assistance for low-income seniors or payments to in-home caregivers — is on the rise.

Studies show that most seniors prefer to remain in their own homes for as long as possible. The In-Home Supportive Services program provides resources for low-income seniors and those with disabilities to hire workers, including family members, to provide support with personal care, household work, and errands. The spectrum of age-related needs also points to an increased demand for health care workers, from home health aides to nurses and doctors.

Over the past four years, the number of residents receiving In-Home Supportive Services has climbed by 31%. Given the increasing senior population, that trend is expected to continue. As In-Home Supportive Services caseloads increase, so too have programs that protect seniors.

Over the past four years, the number of Adult Protective Services cases has risen by 22%. Given that current policies only allow for short-term interventions, the Human Services Agency is exploring a pilot program for long-term case management for Adult Protective Services clients that could improve outcomes.

Helping community members struggling to meet basic needs

Expanding CalFresh to People Receiving SSI / SSP

For the first time ever in California, hundreds of thousands of seniors and people with disabilities who receive Supplemental Security Income / State Supplemental Payment (SSI / SSP) benefits are now able to apply for CalFresh food benefits. This historic change, which took effect on June 1, 2019, is intended to increase nutrition and health and reduce hunger and poverty among California’s low-income seniors and people with disabilities.

The CalFresh food program is the State’s number one defense against hunger and malnutrition. Nearly four million people a month — more than 60,000 in Ventura County — receive benefits on a debit card to purchase food at grocery stores and farmers’ markets. Locally, the average CalFresh household receives $228 in benefits monthly. With SSI/SSP recipients now eligible to apply for CalFresh, seniors and people with disabilities in our community have a new option available to help make ends meet.

Some who are part of households already receiving CalFresh food benefits may receive new state-funded Supplemental Nutrition Benefits or Transitional Nutrition Benefits, with no change or reduction to their SSI/SSP benefits.

The Human Services Agency continues to conduct outreach to help ensure that information about this change in eligibility reaches low-income seniors and people with disabilities who too often find themselves choosing between paying rent, buying food, and paying for medication. Nearly 3,000 newly-eligible Ventura County residents are now receiving nutrition benefits, with several thousand more expected to enroll in the coming months.

California Statewide Automated Welfare System

Through the Statewide Automated Welfare System consortia, the state and counties provide public assistance benefits to over 13 million Californians with low incomes. Efforts are currently underway to consolidate the existing three consortia systems and functionality into one single system: California Statewide Automated Welfare System (CalSAWS). During the past year, Human Services Agency Director Barry L. Zimmerman has advanced efforts to develop the single platform that will be utilized by all counties.

California, its counties, and stakeholders have a decades-long partnership and commitment to excellence in service delivery for health and human services programs. The CalSAWS development process will be improved through meaningful stakeholder, client, and advocate input on elements that impact service delivery. The new system is scheduled to launch in phases beginning in 2022.
Parents as Teachers — Home Visiting Initiative

This past spring, the Human Services Agency partnered with the Ventura County Public Health Department to launch the "Parents as Teachers" program for first-time parenting or pregnant CalWORKs participants. The goals of the program are to prevent child abuse and neglect, increase parent knowledge and support, enhance family functioning, improve parent-child interactions, and increase inclusive child-rearing practices. The program offers group sessions that include monthly group meetings, individual support, and community connections.

The Human Services Agency launched Parents as Teachers in April of 2019 and as of now there are 33 families enrolled. At the early stage, Public Health Nurses providing services to parents are reporting positive changes in parent-child interactions. With plans in place to extend the program to additional families in the coming year, more parents will receive services that can improve their parenting skills and community connections.

Veterans Phoenix Program

The Human Services Agency recently launched the Veterans Phoenix Program, a partnership between the Ventura County Veterans Services Office and the Public Defender's Office. The program is designed to address the lack of mental health and substance abuse resources for veterans who are involved with the Veterans Court but not eligible Veterans Affairs services. The Veterans Phoenix Program seeks to assess and link veterans to appropriate treatment. By identifying addiction and mental health challenges that impact their ability to successfully parent their children, veterans can find the strength that allows them to humble themselves and ask for help. Today, Manny works with other families and helps them navigate their own reunification journeys. His responsibilities include supporting families in accompanying them to court, offering resources, helping facilitate more effective communication with social workers, and assisting families through the "Parents as Teachers" program. When not busy at work, Manny is coaching his sons in soccer, baseball, and basketball.

SUCCESS Story

Reunifying Families

In 2012, Manny Arroyo's drug and alcohol addiction contributed to several domestic violence incidents that ultimately led to his incarceration and the loss of his three young sons. During his incarceration, one of Manny’s cellmates told him about Genesis Sober Living’s program called “Dark and Kindle,” which provides recovery services and allows supervised visitation with children who have been removed. Manny made the decision to get help and enrolled in the program.

With help of the Dads and Kids program and from his Child Welfare social worker, Manny began taking steps to rebuild his life and develop the structure that he needed to hold his life together. "I started working on myself, finding myself, loving myself, and then realizing what I had to do — take care of myself before I could take care of my kids." After making significant changes in his life, he and his sons were granted more time for visitation. In 2014, Manny was granted full custody of the three sons. Clean and sober since and with his sons back in his life, Manny largely credits Children & Family Services for getting him back on track. "I tell my own sons that I had hope, that I could really, that it's not too late … just having that communication with someone that was non-judgmental was a big impact for me."
Implementing new systems and services to drive results

Aligning Career Services
Workforce Innovation & Opportunity Act, CalWORKs, and CalFresh Employment & Training Services are operated within the Human Services Agency. These programs are designed to assist participants in obtaining work-related skills necessary to secure employment and/or increase earnings to livable-wage levels, which can reduce reliance on public benefits. Efforts are currently underway to align and strengthen those services, so that all job seekers may benefit from state-of-the-art skills development and training. Aligning these services also creates savings through shared infrastructure and staff resources. Early results are encouraging: the majority of Ventura County CalWorks clients — 64.7 percent — complete services with earnings.

Piloting California’s First Electronic Child Welfare Case File System
Many of the older foster youth served by the county have often been in the child welfare system longer, resulting in extensive case files with hundreds of pages that are difficult to review for pertinent information, including the names of relatives and family friends who may be willing to take more prominent roles in supporting these youth. Additionally, team support of children and families across agencies requires multiple people to have ready access to key information, which can be difficult for cases with large case files. The Human Services Agency is responding by piloting a new application designed to transform paper files into electronic files, automate displays of critical data needed for decision making, and enable searches for information that would otherwise be nearly inaccessible. This electronic case file solution for child welfare, the first of its kind to be piloted in the state of California also, facilitates the sharing of child welfare information across multiple locations and a variety of desktop and mobile devices. Use of this repository for all case documents, photos, audio, and videos, will be evaluated for its effectiveness and efficiency in improving service delivery to vulnerable youth.

Farmworker Resource Program Launches
On behalf of the Ventura County Board of Supervisors and County Executive Office, the Human Services Agency recently launched the Farmworker Resource Program, the first of its kind in California. The primary location is in Oxnard, with satellite offices in Santa Paula and Fillmore, and extended evening and weekend hours to make the program accessible. The program is designed to build trust and relationships among the agricultural community, and to assist in facilitating prompt resolutions to workplace concerns such as payroll issues and working conditions, navigating public agencies, and leveraging existing resources. The program was developed by an eight-member advisory committee, facilitated by the County Executive Office, that included members appointed by the Ventura County Farm Bureau and the Mixteco Indigena Community Organizing Project. The committee held 14 organizing meetings with Spanish and Mixteco interpreters available to allow for public participation and comment in the development of the program. The advisory committee will monitor and evaluate the program as it evolves.
Connecting individuals and families seeking help to a network of agencies

Housing Program Makes a Difference

The Housing & Disability Advocacy Program (HDAP) was established several years ago to assist individuals with disabilities who are experiencing homelessness apply for disability benefit programs while also receiving housing assistance. HDAP requires utilization of a “Housing First” approach, which includes housing individuals without preconditions and helping clients secure permanent housing as soon as possible. Individuals who have disabilities and are experiencing homelessness are given highest priority.

Ventura County is one of 39 California counties participating in HDAP, with each county program tailored to its community. The Human Services Agency follows “whole person” and Trauma Informed approaches to services, and collaborates with established partners such as Veteran Services, Whole Person Care, the Ventura County Continuum of Care, and community-based organizations.

The program is already making a positive difference in people’s lives. Of the 25 households served to date, 12 have secured permanent housing and 14 have begun receiving disability benefits. Several families remain in HDAP-funded interim housing and continue to receive supportive services while they pursue permanent housing solutions.

Year-Round Shelters For the Homeless

During the past year, the County Executive Office and the Human Services Agency worked with the cities of Ventura and Oxnard in a joint effort to design, develop and implement a Homeless Shelter System that is responsive to the growing demand for shelter and services for those experiencing homelessness. By working together, real progress towards the establishment of 24-hour facilities that provide a safe place to sleep and services has been made, including the following benchmarks:

- Ratification of a 3-way shelter system agreement.
- Designation of a permanent shelter location for the City of Oxnard’s shelter within a portion of a County facility on Knoll Drive in Ventura, and completion of design specifications.
- Launch of the Temporary West County Emergency Shelter Navigation Center that serves as a model for the permanent shelter in Oxnard.
- Selection of a single non-profit organization—Mercy House—to operate the shelters in Oxnard and Ventura.

The Temporary Emergency Shelter and Navigation Center, which opened on January 30, 2019, is a shared shelter with the City of Oxnard and the City of Ventura. The shelter serves 130 individuals experiencing homelessness, providing basic needs and social services to one location. The Human Services Agency coordinates trainings for partners on public assistance programs, Mental Health First Aid and the Homeless Management Information Services data system—a key tool that is used to help track and provide case management services for shelter clients.

With the Ventura shelter scheduled to open in Winter 2019-2020, Ventura County will have two locations where individuals can go to sleep at night and wake to find access to supportive social services.
Tragedy and Recovery

On the evening of November 7, 2018 around 11:30 p.m., a mass shooting claiming 12 lives, including a Ventura County Sheriff’s Deputy, occurred at the Borderline Bar & Grill in Thousand Oaks. By the next day, first responders were also on the scene battling two major wildfires: the Hill Canyon Fire, which started in the Santa Rosa Valley, and the Woolsey Fire near Simi Valley.

The County Office of Emergency Services activated the Emergency Operations Center (EOC) to respond to both the shooting and the fires. The Human Services Agency deployed Veteran Services and Employment Services staff to the County’s Family Assistance Center to provide services to those affected by the mass shooting. Further, with oversight responsibility for Mass Care & Shelter Operations, Human Services Agency deployed staff to the EOC to coordinate services for evacuees with the Red Cross. At the same time, the Agency’s Department Operations Center, staffed by key members of the disaster response team, convened to ensure that mission essential human services continued uninterrupted.

Additionally, the Human Services Agency managed the County’s Local Assistance Center in Thousand Oaks where staff from intake & eligibility, homeless services, and veteran services provided services and information to over 180 residents. Further, over $307,000 in CalFresh disaster related food benefits were issued to residents impacted by the fires.

To ensure that the County is ready to meet community needs during a disaster, the Human Services Agency is partnering with county agencies, cities, school districts and community partners to develop a regional Mass Care & Shelter Plan slated for final approval in 2019. Meetings are taking place with officials in each city to ensure that local feedback is taken into account during the planning process. Additionally, county partners are exploring development of a shelter case management system that would assist in delivering and tracking services for residents impacted by disasters.

To honor the 12 victims of the Borderline shooting, an oak tree at the sight of the shooting has been made a landmark and permanently lit up in their memory.
